boardroom,
HOW WE ACT MATTERS.
When it comes to ethics, we know that it’s the small decisions we make and little actions we take every day that define KCE’s culture. Speak up if something is wrong. Act honestly and respectfully. Do business with integrity.

These concepts are not difficult on their own, but ethics dilemmas certainly can be. Your own conscience and instincts are the best tools you have for navigating ethics decisions, but this guide and KCE leadership are here to support you. We trust you will actively contribute to building an ethical company, one choice at a time.
At KinderCare Education (KCE), we are role models for the children in our care. Through our actions, we teach children how to navigate the world with honesty and integrity.

KCE has high ethical standards for each and every person in the company. We expect you to act according to the laws and regulations that govern our industry and your location. We also expect you to do what is just and fair. Together, we uphold these expectations to create an environment where honesty and integrity are evident in everything we do.

HOW TO USE THIS GUIDE

You face ethical choices every day in your work and personal life. Do you return the $20 bill you saw someone drop or call it finders keepers? Do you speak up when you see a coworker alter child supervision records or decide it isn’t your place to tell on your coworkers?

This guide is meant to help you make choices that are in line with KCE’s values and uphold our legal obligations when you face these dilemmas at work. It isn’t possible to cover every situation that you may encounter. With these principles as a guide, along with your other ethics resources, you have the tools to make decisions that best support KCE families, employees, and the company.
Everyone at KCE is expected to:

• Speak Up
  Speaking up keeps KCE strong.

• Protect Children
  If you see something, say something.

• Embrace Honesty
  Speak and act truthfully and expect the same from others.

• Respect People
  Treat others the way you want to be treated.

• Protect Information
  Share meaningful moments, not sensitive information.

• Compete Fairly
  From freeze tag to free markets, we play by the rules.
SPEAKING UP KEEPS KCE STRONG.

You are required to report ethics concerns—anything that is illegal or goes against the principles in this guide. This is true even if the person you’re reporting is a manager, director, or executive.

KCE will not retaliate against any employee who makes a good faith report of ethics concerns or suspected harassment or discrimination. KCE believes that employees feeling free to report these issues keeps our company healthy. Reporting ethics concerns means the issues can be addressed and resolved. If no one speaks up, ethics problems can undermine our company’s purpose.

Honesty helps us to create a work environment we can all be proud of. KCE has an Ethics Hotline for just this purpose, and you can remain completely anonymous if you want to. If you witness something questionable or suspect an ethics issue, talk to your manager or another leader in the company, or call the Ethics Hotline. The key is that you speak up.
RECOGNIZING ETHICS PROBLEMS
When you hear phrases like these, you should take a step back and consider whether there is an ethical problem.
- “No one will ever know.”
- “Everybody does it.”
- “No one will get hurt.”
- “We didn’t have this conversation.”
- “I could get in big trouble for this.”
- “Shred it fast.”

RESPONDING TO ETHICS CONCERNS
If you suspect an ethics problem:
- Do a gut check. Ask yourself: Is this right? Would I want my actions shown on the evening news? What would I tell my child to do?
- Use your resources, including your manager, another leader in the company, or the Ethics Hotline for guidance.
- Use good judgment and your own conscience to guide your behavior.
SPEAKING UP IN ACTION

You've seen a coworker clocking in for his friend who is always running behind. His friend is usually just a couple of minutes late, and your manager doesn’t seem to notice. Your gut tells you it’s not right or fair, even though no one else has spoken up.

ACTION

Trust your gut. Falsifying time punches, even by just a few minutes, is not okay. Bring it up to your manager. She might not know what is going on, or how it is impacting his coworkers. If for some reason you don’t feel comfortable talking to your manager, speak with another leader or call the Ethics Hotline.

You are an administrative assistant for your department head, and you reconcile her P-Card statements each month. This month she spent money on a car rental and eating out, which is normal for her position. However, you notice that the dates coincide with her vacation time. When you asked her about the transactions she tells you, “Just mark those as part of the trip from the week before. There must have been a problem with the card and the transactions didn’t go through right away.” This explanation doesn’t seem quite right to you.

ACTION

You can start by telling your manager you need clarification on the transactions to accurately reconcile the statement. If further discussion doesn’t resolve the issue or you don’t feel that you can ask for more information, bring your concern to another manager or your Human Resources Business Partner, or call the Ethics Hotline.
IF YOU SEE SOMETHING, SAY SOMETHING.

Report suspected child abuse or neglect.

The vast majority of our employees are legally required to report any reasonable suspicion of child abuse or neglect to their local Child Protective Services agency (CPS).

- Specific requirements vary by state. Know and understand your state’s laws. If you have questions, talk with your manager right away.
- KCE considers you a “mandatory reporter” even if you don’t work directly with children.
HOW DO I KNOW WHEN TO REPORT?
Trust your gut and don’t overthink it. You do not need to be certain, and you do not need to prove anything. Your duty is to report any reasonable suspicion so CPS can take appropriate action.

SHOULD I TALK TO MY MANAGER?
Yes. You should “speak up” to both CPS and your manager. As a KCE employee, you are required to report to CPS and you should report internally. You are strongly urged to report the incident directly to your manager, but you can also call the Ethics Hotline, which allows you to report anonymously.

It is best for your manager to know what is happening as soon as possible, as he or she will likely be the first point of contact for CPS and will need to be prepared to address issues promptly.

CAN MY MANAGER CALL CPS FOR ME?
Ideally, you and your manager call CPS together. You can call on your own, you can call together, or your manager can call on your behalf—but only one report is required. If your manager says she will call for you, then follow up to make sure she made the report. If, for any reason, you are not confident she made the report, you still have an obligation to report to CPS yourself.
PROTECTING CHILDREN IN ACTION

You are walking four-year-old Jenny to the bus and notice a red mark on her arm. You ask what happened and she says, “Teacher Kate grabbed me and dragged me away when I was playing bears with Stephen today, and it hurt. I think she was mad.”

ACTION

Ideally, you report the incident to your manager right away and call CPS together. Your manager will contact the family, call KCE Incident Reporting, and address the issue with Teacher Kate. If for some reason you don’t feel comfortable reporting the incident to your manager, you still must call CPS and the Ethics Hotline.

You’re a manager and your toddler teacher mentioned that Sammy has come to school in the same dirty clothes four days this week. She said she has talked to his family about it before. Last week you lent a hand in the classroom at snack time and noticed that Sammy seemed overly hungry. His teacher also said that he has come to school with a dirty diaper often enough that she’s noticed it. These incidents combined make you think that Sammy might not be getting the care he needs at home.

ACTION

Report your concerns to CPS and tell your manager or call the Ethics Hotline. CPS will evaluate whether Sammy is being neglected at home.
SPEAK AND ACT TRUTHFULLY AND EXPECT THE SAME FROM OTHERS.

Honesty builds trust, an essential component of our work. Families trust us to care for and educate their children. When children trust their teachers, they feel comfortable exploring new things. Coworkers who are open and honest can help each other succeed and share great ideas.

ACCURATE RECORDS

From punching in and taking name-to-face attendance throughout the day, to recording tuition payments, preparing purchase orders, producing financial reports, and tracking medications given, there’s a lot to keep track of every day at KCE. Keeping accurate records is essential to creating a safe environment for kids and building a thriving business.

WHY DO WE KEEP ACCURATE RECORDS?

• It keeps children safe. Attendance, medicine, food, care routines, behavior issues, and more are carefully tracked to create a safe environment for children.

• It’s the law. Much of what we record is required by federal, state, or local regulations.

• It strengthens our business. To run a business effectively and communicate with families, licensing agents, clients, and supporting departments, a manager needs accurate information.
WHAT DO ACCURATE RECORDS LOOK LIKE?

Accurate records:

- Are honest. Honest records are more important than flattering records. Do not falsify records for any reason.
- Are clear. Data is useless if it’s not understandable. Be straightforward and clear in all required reports.
- Are timely. It is difficult to get accurate, honest, and clear records if you put off your reporting and try to fill in information from memory. Track information as you go.
- Adhere to industry standards. For instance, we follow Generally Accepted Accounting Principles (GAAP) for all accounting procedures.
FINANCIAL MISCONDUCT

Financial misconduct is any behavior that could be interpreted as stealing from the company, even if there is no personal financial gain. It could be anything from applying payment received from one family to another family’s account to a complex fraud involving falsified financial records, multiple people, and many thousands of dollars. KCE does not tolerate financial misconduct of any kind.

Financial misconduct could include:
- Using a P-Card for personal spending
- Accepting cash tuition payments and pocketing the money
- Giving improper tuition discounts
- Falsifying financial statements
- Clocking in before your shift starts

CONFLICTS OF INTEREST

If you think an outside activity or relationship may interfere with your commitment to KCE, there may be a conflict of interest. The best way to avoid conflicts of interest is to be open and honest about relationships and financial interests that might impact your professional life. Possible conflicts of interest include:

Outside Employment

• If you have a second job, choose a company that is not a competitor. Make sure the type of work you choose is in keeping with the image that KCE represents and allows you to fully devote the time you need to do your job at KCE.

Receiving Gifts

• It is okay to accept small tokens of appreciation from families like a coffee store gift card or holiday basket, but you need to politely decline cash or gifts of significant size or value.

• Similarly, vendors with whom we have a business relationship may occasionally invite you to an event or to share a meal—for example, attending a vendor-hosted reception at the NAEYC conference. You may accept gifts of insignificant value or be entertained by potential or actual vendors if such entertainment is reasonable, consistent with KCE’s usual business practices and ethical standards, does not violate any law, and would never embarrass KCE. However, these gestures cannot influence our buying decisions, and all business must be awarded based on cost and overall value to KCE.

Outside Business Interests

• If a KCE employee’s family member wants to sell goods or services to KCE, that decision must be made, and the work must be managed, by someone who is not related to the vendor.
EMBRACING HONESTY IN ACTION

You sent an email to a vendor you work with by accident. The email included financial data that should not have been shared with anyone outside the company.

ACTION

Acknowledge your mistake. Tell your manager right away that you have accidentally shared sensitive information so it can be properly addressed.

It’s mid-December and holiday gifts are going around. One parent sent you a tin of cookies, another gave you a coffee card, and a third put cash in a card.

ACTION

While it’s okay to accept the cookies and gift card, tell the third family that you can’t accept cash, but you appreciate the gesture. Let your manager know about the conversation.

Last month the flu was going around and you spent a lot of time helping in classrooms, which put you behind on paperwork. You meant to update your subsidy records to reflect actual attendance, but didn’t get to it. The reports are due and you want to get them in on time.

ACTION

If you submit the incorrect numbers, you will receive overpayment for the days children were out sick. This is not honest. Take the time to make the corrections before submitting your report.
TREAT OTHERS HOW YOU WANT TO BE TREATED

KCE grows stronger with each new person and perspective we welcome into the company. When we create an environment where everyone can thrive, we build a dynamic and strong company.

A diversity of talents, personalities, passions, beliefs, cultures, lifestyles, economic backgrounds, races, religions, genders, sexual orientations, ages, physical abilities, and more all contribute to the rich educational experience we provide for children and the supportive work environment we create at KCE.
Fostering a welcoming atmosphere for everyone at KCE gives children a safe place to learn and explore just what makes us each different and alike, and how to appreciate each other. Including all types of people in the KCE experience enhances children’s understanding of the world around them and creates a vibrant company culture that encourages employees to grow and learn from one another.

KCE follows all laws that prohibit discrimination, harassment, and retaliation. We are an Equal Opportunity Employer. If you think someone at KCE is facing discrimination, reach out to your manager, the Ethics Hotline, or Inclusion Services.
RESPECTING PEOPLE IN ACTION

A child who uses a wheelchair will be joining your class next week. You’re not sure how to make the classroom work best for his needs or how to answer questions the other children may have. You want to be prepared for his first day.

ACTION

Talk with his parents about how to meet his individual needs. Connect with your manager to talk through a plan for making the child and family feel welcome on his first day. If you want more help, reach out to Inclusion Services.

A woman applied for an open position as a teacher. She came to the interview wearing a hijab. She is highly qualified, and her interview went very well. You want to hire her, but you’re concerned that it may affect your family retention rate. One parent made jokes about terrorism after he saw the woman come in for her interview. Another parent asked whether you planned to interview anyone else or “just the one with the head scarf.” You think some families will have a negative reaction to the new teacher.

ACTION

KCE does not discriminate on the basis of religion and does not make hiring decision based on characteristics protected by law. Talk to your District Manager or call the Ethics Hotline. They can help you respond to any parent concerns when you hire her.
SHARE MEANINGFUL MOMENTS, NOT SENSITIVE INFORMATION

Information is a critical business asset, and you are trusted to keep it safe. KCE’s confidential information is not public, but is available to you as an employee. It may not be shared outside of KCE.

- People share a lot of personal information with us when they enroll their children or join our company; some of it is confidential. They have a right to expect KCE to keep it private. It is not ours to share.

- KCE’s operational data, such as financial reports, strategic and marketing plans, and human resources records are confidential.

Other sensitive information might be available to others, but should still be handled with care and used only in the way KCE intends.

- Proprietary information like our curriculum and training materials are part of what makes KCE programs special and distinctly KCE. Other intellectual property such as our brand names, logos, and engagement scores are also important business assets that must be safeguarded.
Be aware of where confidential and sensitive information might appear, such as on enrollment forms, health records, subsidy records, personnel records, and even in emails and in-person conversations. Keep this information safe.

- Keep documents containing confidential information in a secure, inaccessible place.
- Have business discussions in private places.
- Make conscious decisions about when and where to share information.
- Refer outside requests for information, including media inquiries, to your manager or KCE Communications.
PROTECTING INFORMATION IN ACTION

1. A parent asks you for another parent’s phone number so he can set up a play date for their children. You know the children are friends and don’t think the other parent would mind, but you should not share that information.

ACTION
Try connecting the parents at pick-up time or have him write a note to the friend’s parent that you can put in the child’s cubby.

You were talking to a coworker in the parking lot about one of the children in your program. A parent overheard private information about the child’s medical condition.

ACTION
Be honest about the mistake and tell your manager what happened. In the future, be more careful about where you have business discussions.

As part of your job in the Tax Department, you have access to the company’s detailed financial reports. You know that we exceeded our financial projections last quarter. You’re excited to be part of a growing company and want to tell your friends.

ACTION
Share your excitement, but not the details.
FROM FREEZE TAG TO FREE MARKETS, WE PLAY BY THE RULES

Children know what happens when someone changes the rules in the middle of a game or just plain cheats—no one wants to play with them anymore. Business is not much different. Business is regulated through laws designed to keep businesses honest, and KCE abides by those rules.

Giving Gifts to Government Employees
As part of our work, we have ongoing relationships with government employees. Most are subject to their own rules about receiving gifts, just as KCE employees are, and we respect those limitations at all times.

Truth in Advertising
Marketing and advertising may not make false or misleading claims about the company or its competitors.

Respect Others’ Intellectual Property
Just as we are careful to protect our own intellectual property (IP), it is important to respect the IP rights of others.
COMPETING FAIRLY IN ACTION

You want to place an ad in a local magazine to draw new families into your Pre-K program. You plan to say, “If you enroll your child in KinderCare’s Pre-K program, she will start kindergarten at the top of her class.”

ACTION

This statement makes a claim that may be misleading. Instead, you could write the ad to say, “KinderCare’s research-based curriculum provides an enriching Pre-K experience for children entering Kindergarten.”

A family comes in to tour your center and asks you how your center compares to the competitor down the street. You’ve heard the center down the street may lose its accreditation.

ACTION

We can’t share rumors about competitors. Instead, focus on the strengths of your program, like our research-based curriculum, your program’s accreditation, and your talented teachers. If you’re certain that the neighboring center has lost its accreditation, you can point that out.

As an Area Manager, you want to establish a relationship with the new principal of an elementary school in your area. You want some time to learn about her vision for the school and introduce her to KCE’s programs. You think a nice meal would be a good way to open the discussion, but you know that government employees are often subject to restrictions about accepting gifts and hospitality. You don’t want to put her in a tough spot.

ACTION

Tell the principal that you’d like to talk over lunch and ask whether her school district’s rules allow this type of meeting. If it is not allowed, ask if you could meet at her office. It is your responsibility to inquire about, understand, and follow the limits of her position.
IT’S EASY TO TAKE ACTION—YOU HAVE SUPPORT

Talk to Someone

If you’re facing an ethics issue, the first action you can take is to ask for help. From your manager to the Ethics Hotline, we’re here for you. Reach out through a conversation, phone call, or email if you need guidance.

CALLING THE ETHICS HOTLINE

When you call the Ethics Hotline, KCE takes your report seriously. We will treat you with respect as we address your concerns.

- Your number does not show up on caller ID.
- You will reach a voicemail box to leave a message.
- Leave as much information as you can.
- It is helpful if you leave contact information, but you can choose to remain anonymous.
- We will investigate your concern.
- If you choose to share your contact information, the Employee Relations team will follow up with you within 24 hours.

KCE will never retaliate against you for honestly reporting suspected ethics issues.
AN ETHICAL CULTURE STARTS WITH YOU.
